CONSIDER THIS

There are many challenges which face human beings in 2026. We live in what is being called the information age by experts. There is more information at the fingertips (literally) of people today than at any other time in recorded history. Or so we are told. I wonder if the volumes of knowledge available to us equals that which is being hidden from the public? It would be good if honesty and integrity were keeping pace with the flood of information that we are experiencing, but it seems that the only thing keeping pace is man's sin, to the point that we no longer seem to distinguish between truth and error, good and evil, and right from wrong. We are approaching a breaking point, and have lost the ability to trust one another, or even the systems which have been established for our benefit. It reminds me of the history of Israel written in the Old Testament.. When are we going to realize that God, and His Word, are the only hope we have.
